

Out-of-Province and Out-of-Country Treatment for Eating Disorders

In all provinces, to obtain provincial health insurance coverage for out-of-province and out-of-country eating disorder treatment, a similar process must be followed. Note that government-funded treatment facilities are relatively scarce in Canada and they are often unable to accommodate to out-of-province clients.

The process across Canada usually involves the following steps:

1. The client must be assessed and referred in writing by an appropriate eating disorders specialist.
2. A letter of request and/or the necessary application forms from a physician specializing in eating disorders must be sent to the Ministry of Health in the client's home province.

The letter of request/application must include the following:

- Evidence that the client has explored the resources available within her/his province (and Canada) and that there are no services that will be available within a reasonable amount of time
- Contact information for the proposed out-of-country treatment centre to which the individual wishes to go must also be included in the letter with verification that it is an accredited facility.
- Pertinent medical records, clinical information or health and treatment history in support of the application should be appended if appropriate.

3. The request will receive approval or denial by the corresponding provincial government panel. If denied there are appeal processes that can be followed in each province.
