

PARTICIPANT RECRUITMENT

We are seeking participants for an interview-based study on atypical anorexia nervosa and weight stigma.

PARTICIPANT INFORMATION

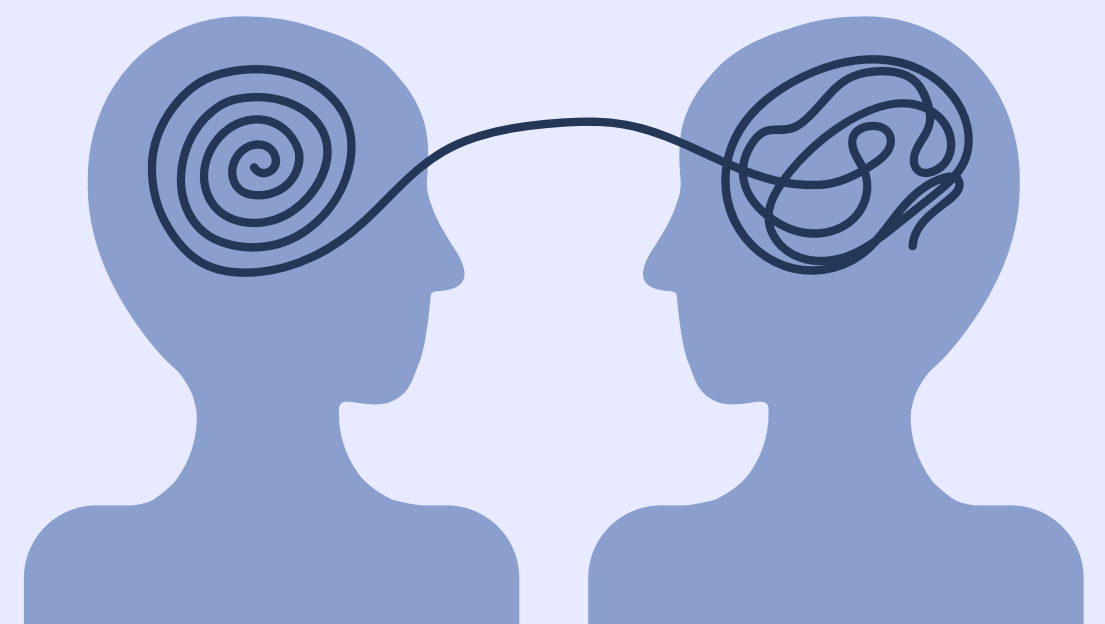

The goal of this study is to better understand how negative attitudes and beliefs about body size (i.e. weight stigma) shape how individuals with atypical anorexia nervosa view and understand their illness.

We will be asking questions about your experience with weight stigma in relation to your previous diagnosis of atypical anorexia nervosa. Our hope with this research is to inform weight stigma interventions for peers and professionals while contributing to our growing understanding of atypical anorexia nervosa.

ELIGIBILITY

You are eligible to participate in this study if you meet the following criteria:

- You are over the age of 19.
- You live in Canada or the U.S.A.
- You have previously received a formal diagnosis of Atypical Anorexia Nervosa.
- You have been in recovery from the diagnosed eating disorder for at least one year.
- You do not currently have a mental health diagnosis that you believe could lead to safety concerns that arise through participation in this study.

RESEARCHERS

This study is being conducted by Sage DaSilva, a third-year Masters in Counselling student at the University of Victoria, working under the supervision of Dr. Sarah Nutter.
